From the output table, we can see that some items are duplicate with retweet top N, which means that there's high relation ship between retweet action and favorite action. If the favorite count is high, then the retweet count should be also high with big probability. We can also find that favorite count is much bigger than the retweet count, which means follower usually click the favorite button but not retweet the certain tweet, then we may think retweet can describe the love level better.

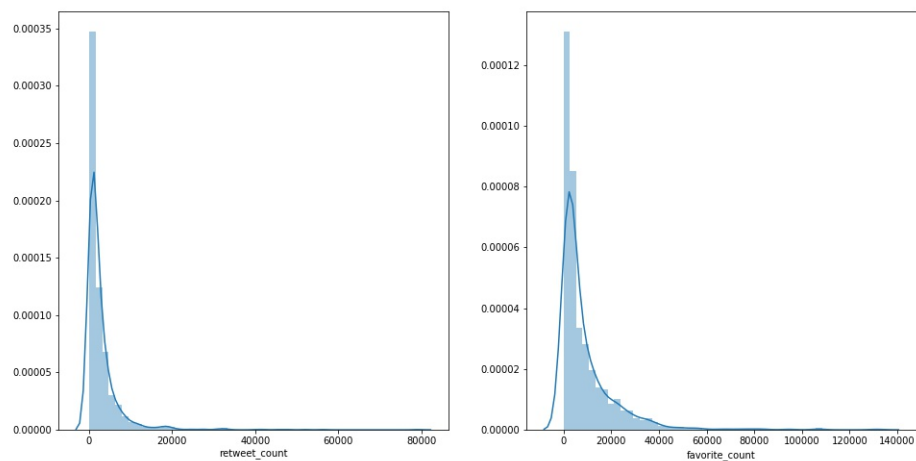

1, we do visualization for the author rating value and correlation between retweet count and favorite count

From the figure, we can see that, WeRateDogs always provide 1-14 rating value for the dogs. the most frequent score author provides is 10, 11, 12; 13 should be middle layer score; 14 should be high score. We can also see some weird score, e.g., 9.75, 11.26, 11.27, 13.5. Can check more for the weird score, may author wants to describe more subjective feeling on them.

From the figure, we can see there is strong correlation between retweet count and favorite count, this meets our expectation.

From the figure, we can see favorite count is higher and wider than retweet count. May this because it's easier to attract user to make a 'click' action compared to retweet. The tail is long for both retweet and favorite, which means only a very small part of the tweets will motivate a large amount of users to retweet

2, show the high score dogs, just show the first 18 dogs for display

This is Atticus. He's quite simply America af.
1776/10 <https://t.co/GRXwMxLBkh>

I'm Atticus

After so many requests, here you go. Good doggo.
420/10 <https://t.co/UfAAolgaeY>

Here we have perhaps the wisest dog of all. Above average with light sabers. Immortal as h*ck. 14/10 dog, or dog not, there is no try <https://t.co/upRYxG4KbG>

Say hello to Smiley. He's a blind therapy doggo having a h*ckin blast high steppin around in the snow. 14/10 would follow anywhere

Markus Krantz at Drottninggatan.

Saturday at 6:40 PM · Stockholm, Sweden · 🌐

Var på Drottninggatan ikväll. Såg att ingen lagt en blomma eller tändt ett ljus på platsen där den stackars hunden blev injätkörd under fredagens attack.

Så vi gav den en egen liten minnesplats. Halsbandet tillhörde min egna första hund, Ebba, som gick bort i somras.

Vila i frid lilla vän ❤️

#prayforstockholm

Was on the high street tonight. Saw that no one put a flower or lit a candle in the place where the poor dog was killed during Friday's attack.

So we gave it our own little memorial. The necklace belonged to my own first dog, Ebba, who passed away this summer.

Rest in peace little friend ❤️
